Elephant from India and RKS of the United States Formalize a Bridge Between Continents and Cultures

Los Angeles, California and Pune, India, October 16, 2007 – RKS announces the signing of a formal strategic partnership with India’s leading strategic design firm.

“Today we have announced a strategic partnership that will provide a bridge for North American clients seeking to improve their performance in the growing Indian market, and for Indian companies seeking presence in the US” said Ravi Sawhney, PhD, CEO of US-based RKS. Together Mr. Sawhney and Mr. Sudhir Sharma, Director of Elephant Strategy + Design, described the unmistakable trend toward globalization by product manufacturers & service providers seeking access to emerging markets whose cultures are sometimes unfamiliar to them.

Mr. Sawhney said “we think of ourselves as the guide for companies building brand value globally. With our partners at Elephant, we’re able to craft a segment-specific understanding of international customs and cultures in order to develop new products and services that appeal to a range of global tastes and preferences.” With the Elephant partnership, RKS and Elephant hope to deliver an even broader range of value and market access to its clients, which include many US-based market leaders.

As part of the agreement, RKS will license the use of its exclusive Psycho-Aesthetics methodology. RKS uses this platform to enable its clients to achieve market goals once newly designed products are launched. With this platform, RKS is able to determine sources of market demand, and pinpoint the nature of target audience tastes and preferences in advance of the product design process.
